

High-Density Workloads

Overcome demand vs. supply power constraints for high-performance compute and AI/xPU workloads.

The surge in high-density workloads has organizations scrambling to find data centers that can meet power provisioning demands. Our advanced colocation data centers have pre-contracted utility power in reserve—plus the space, connectivity and advanced cooling solutions required—to support your high-density workload requirements.

How We Work With You

Our experts are here to partner with your IT team to implement the best-fit plan for your high-performance workload requirements. For planning, budgeting and implementation purposes, we will work with you to:

At Centersquare, we are prepared to meet skyrocketing data center power demand due to proactive allocation of utility power, pre-negotiated utility contracts, and continuous reinvestments. We perform ongoing facility upgrades and expansions to provide our customers with speed to value in highly reliable, highly connected facilities built to support emerging infrastructure technologies.

Centersquare Benefits for High-Density Workloads

Pre-contracted Available Power

Procure high-density-ready colocation power and space in key metros without delay and accelerate power provisioning to keep pace with deployment timelines.

Advanced Cooling

Access high-efficiency air-based cooling that meets most workload requirements, or work with our team to incorporate hybrid- and liquid-cooled solutions, as necessary.
